ORLANDO, FL - DIST. 5 - "My mother in law- Kat Gordon said to me before I decided to run for public office that "you will get what you focus on". I plan on focusing on every home in the district", says Jibreel Ali who is running for District 5 Commissioner and who also descends from a family that has been deeply rooted in the community for more than a half-century. He and his wife Stacey Gordon -Ali have been living in Orlando for years and Ali has been working to make changes in the district as well as in the City. He is President of Spring Lake Manor Neighborhood Association, Vice President of the West Lakes Economic Opportunity Council and Executive, Precinct Committeeman and Executive Director of 1Community1Orlando.

Growing up in Rock Lake, Ali learned to understand the definition of service through his Grandmother Mable Butler. Butler, In a interview with Ali states, that "There is a difference between running for office and serving". She goes on to tell Ali about how she believes that carrying the title of commissioner is "more than just wearing a title, but serving the people".

Ali then asked Butler:

Ali: "What made you wanna serve?"

Butler: "The need for it"

In a time where nobody felt it necessary to run for commissioner when there was a great need for one, Mable Butler stood up to the plate AND WON!

Butler, came to Orlando in 1957 - a time when blacks were victims of discrimination reinforced by law. She was elected the county's first black commissioner in 1990 after serving on Orlando's City Council for eight years. Her climb to political office started with grass-roots efforts in everything from helping the elderly to voter registration drives. Butler spent five years at the helm of a multipurpose center in west Orange County. In the 1970s and early 1980s, she was instrumental in getting the Meals on Wheels program established in much of west Orange County. Politicians who wanted the black vote knew to make friends with Butler, who was a force on the political scene even before she was elected to public office. She was controversial but direct. People knew where she was coming from and what she wanted. Butler was a tenacious fighter when it came to bringing more political clout and jobs to blacks. Following in the examples of Butler, Ali as well is fighting to serve as commissioner and is committed to improving the lives of the residents in the community. Butler states with smiles in interview with Ali that she is a proud grandmother and stands behind his campaign and encourages the district to do the same.

King has been traveling from state to state creating inspirational Hip Hop and sharing his Messianic faith through preaching and teaching in the streets.
