Sunniland Roofing Supplies – Metal Roofing Metal has become one of today's most popular roofing materials for a lot of good reasons. Despite its lightweight, it's tough enough to withstand the most devastating weather events, from wind-driven rains, extreme heat, and heavy snow to hail, hurricane-force winds, and even fire. It's also just as durable over the long haul. Metal roofing will not rot, crack, split, warp, creep, curl, chip, peel, or erode-making it one of the most investment-smart and environmentally conscious roofing products you can buy. Sunniland Roofing Division distributes a large selection of metal roofing products in a wide variety of attractive designs and colors. Our knowledgeable staff can help you select the product that's just right for your project and budget.

Siding

In the late 1950s and early 60s, vinyl siding made its debut on American homes, in an era when aluminum siding reigned supreme. The earliest vinyl gained a bad reputation; the inferior materials of the day tended to crack and sag. But today's high-tech plastic and vinyl materials combined with modern manufacturing techniques have turned vinyl siding into an exceptionally versatile and high-performing choice for cladding. In fact, it's now chosen for many new home construction, a trend that is only increasing over time. If you are considering siding for your home, here are five major advantages of vinyl siding.

1. Overall Costs Are Less

In general, vinyl siding is a popular choice for many homeowners because it's quite cost effective. According to CostHelper, professionally installed vinyl siding can cost you between $2,500-$8,750 for 1,250 square feet, while professionally installed wood siding can cost you $6,500-$10,000 for the same square footage.

2. It's Incredibly Versatile

Today's vinyl siding comes in hundreds of colors, textures, and profiles to give you complete versatility in designing your dream exterior. Like the look of cedar shakes but prefer the qualities of vinyl? You can find a vinyl replacement that looks so authentic, it fools even the most discriminating eyes. Love Victorian scallops? There are plenty of inexpensive vinyl options for that, too. You can find a vinyl siding style that works with both horizontal and vertical applications for any home profile.

3. More Durable Than Other Siding

Vinyl siding is made to withstand the elements, including heavy wind and impact from hail. In addition, vinyl resists excessive moisture, meaning it won't rot or corrode over time. In many cases, you can get a lifetime warranty on your vinyl siding that is often prorated for up to 50 years on successive owners.

4. It's Virtually Maintenance Free

When it comes to siding, vinyl is about as low maintenance as it gets. Since it resists pests such as termites and blights such as rot, it will keep its original qualities for many years, giving you your money's worth. Also, you'll never need to paint your home — a simple cleaning once a year or so is more than adequate to maintain its original good looks. Once your vinyl siding is installed, you won't have to tax your budget with unexpected costs to keep it looking great.

5. Cuts Home Heating and Cooling Costs

Insulated vinyl siding prevents heat loss between the wall studs in exterior walls, a phenomenon known as "thermal bridging." While most homes have insulation between the wall studs, the studs themselves bleed heat where they come in contact with exterior siding. Insulated vinyl siding places a blanket of protection over the studs, keeping your home warmer in winter and cooler in summer. In addition, insulated vinyl siding may make you eligible for energy tax credits, making it even more economical to install.
