Help Wanted

Where have all the people in the work force gone? Was it Covid? An alien abduction? Where did everyone go?

Michel Rowe, the host of Dirty Jobs (a TV show that has been revitalized) is wondering the same thing. How can 4.5 million employees just vanish from the work force?

Only a percentage of American jobs were transferable to "at home" work and certainly many of those came back to the office environment eventually but what about the service trade? Cooks, bartenders and servers are in constant demand. Help wanted signs are in windows of every type of business. Small companies have shut their doors and others, have taken to drastic options.

I met someone several months ago who told me that he owned an international printing business in western North Carolina and his business was booming. He mentioned that he currently had 800 openings in his company and only 200 people had applied in the last four months. He said out of the 200, 137 were selected and in the end only 28 showed up for work. He told me the average starting salary was $36,000 a year with full benefits and a retirement plan. That works out to about $700 a week before taxes. He also told me his average employee made $65,000 a year. He mentioned that his company had on-site day care and affordable housing was nearby. He thought this would be easy.

The drastic solution? Robots. His company was going to invest 9 million dollars to replace the people he needed with robotics. Sounds like a lot of money but in all reality, it was the amount he would have spent on salaries and now he had a work force that didn't call in sick, didn't need childcare, and could work extended hours and holidays. This is not a good thing for the future of human employees.

Area restaurants have limited their days and shifts to maximize the employees they have. Trades such as construction, electrical and plumbing are not only suffering from shortage of materials and price increases, but also from a lack of trainees that will advance in their companies. This is no joke folks. As I have said before, it will be cheaper to have surgery then to have a plumbing issue fixed in your home within the next few years.

Local colleges, like Cape Fear Community College, are offering fantastic trade programs and some are even eligible for cash back programs once completed. That is called a WIN-WIN in any language. There is nothing wrong with going to college, but wouldn't it make more sense to have a trade that gives you the ability to work anywhere in the country with good pay? I think so. You can always go to college to study Shakespeare or art when you retire.

Learn a trade, go to work, move out of your parent's house. Easy.

Letter to the Editor

By Jaclyn P.

I read Becky Borneman's article in Vol II, Issue 1, January Can Be Puzzling. My family always did jigsaw puzzles growing up in the '60s. My grandparents often had their card table set up with a puzzle in progress, at their beach house in the winter. Since COVID, I started doing them again. (Thank God I had an old fold up card table.)

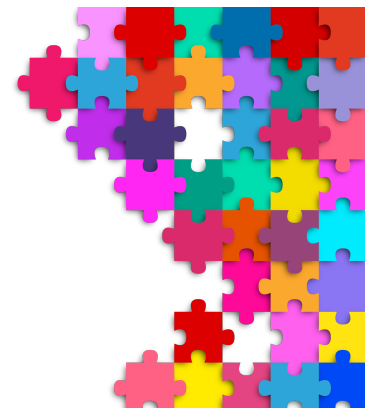

My sister and I would trade, but then I realized I was spending more money then I cared to on new ones. I checked out most of the consignment stores in our area and found their prices just as high as Walmart, with no guarantee all the pieces were included.

Long story short, I was wondering if there are any 'Puzzle Swaps' (for lack of a better term) taking place in our area or any ideas on how to get something like that started?

Are you interested in starting up a puzzle swap or know of one currently ongoing in our local area?

Please let Jaclyn know here:

Human Error

Topsail Gun Gal By Dorothy Royal

Human error is the cause of 99% of all gun related accidents.

Our local community is in mourning. A 15 year old Onslow County boy, the son of a Jacksonville police officer, lost his life from a firearm accident. The information obtained in the released 911 call stated that the boy was outside playing with toy guns when the accident occurred. The initial report stated that the father accidentally shot his son in the head in the front yard of their home with a .45 caliber handgun. Without all the details, we only know the heartbreak that his family must be going through from such a tragedy.

Another young member of our community is in the hospital, struggling to overcome the damage done by 3 shotgun pellets that struck him during a hunting accident on New Year's Eve. Still in the hospital, the young man is being treated aggressively with antibiotics and anti-inflammatory medications. The investigation has been turned over to the NCWRC which handles investigations regarding hunting accidents.

Rule number one in gun safety is ALWAYS TREAT A GUN AS IF IT IS LOADED.

Rule number two in gun safety is NEVER POINT A GUN unless you are prepared to shoot.

Rule number three is to KEEP YOUR FINGER OFF THE TRIGGER until ready to shoot.

These three golden rules can avoid a lot of accidents.

Remember knowledge is power, gun safety is crucial and accidents can be avoided if we all start paying attention.

Gun Gal's Top 15

Can you imagine being stuck in your vehicle for 15 hours on a highway with no chance of going anywhere and risking running out of gas? A ton of people in Virginia suffered through this and the stories are a wake-up call. The weather is freezing, everyone is in the same mess and you have to wonder what exactly is packed away in your car?

Unless you have a tiny car with absolutely no storage, you need to keep the following with you at all times, not just winter. Most everything will fit in a plastic storage bin.

1. Blanket ($5 at most dollar stores).
2. Flashlight with working batteries.
3. Car charger for your current phone.
4. Water - a six pack of bottles is way easier than a gallon container
5. Granola bars or dried snacks that won't go bad but offer fat, sugar and protein
6. Books – we all have them, just pick a thick one
7. Emergency auto kit and first aid kit. Check them often to make sure they have supplies. Aspirin and rubbing alcohol wipes are good for a lot of things.
8. A change of clothes. Generic sweat pant suits that are large enough for any member of your group works. Fashion is not the point, dry clothes are. Extra socks are a great idea too.
9. Towels. Beach towels rolled up don't take up much room but can work as an emergency blanket or a way to carry someone.
10. Matches. Waterproof stick matches can be bought at most grocery stores.
11. Medications. Always try to keep a 24 hour supply in a waterproof container.
12. An address book with phone numbers. You never know if you are stuck near someone who can help. Make sure to include your insurance agent information in case of vehicle damage.
13. Coloring books with crayons and playing cards. These were essential before the internet.
14. Bucket and leash. Sounds weird but these things can come in handy for a lot of reasons.
15. Gas can or an emergency gallon of gas (these are also available at auto stores).

This list can certainly be added to and I encourage it. Most all items will stay useful for 12 months or more and can be replaced as needed.

Charcutery, charcutary, charuterry... Say What? CHARCUTERIE!

By Becky Borneman
Special to the Topsail Times

I don't ever remember a word being mispronounced so much as I do charcuterie. Now, we all have our pet peeve of mispronounced words. SUPPOSAVLY, EXPECIALLY and VALENTIME'S are on the very top of mine. Now it took me a while but I have finally mastered the pronunciation of charcuterie!

But let's talk charcuterie, shall we? These are the latest and greatest things to have for parties or small get-togethers or even on date night. The French word charcuterie translates to Pork Butcher. Many of these boards come with cured meats and cheeses, pickles and jams and fruits. While there are many ways to create a charcuterie board, I prefer the simpler version. I like the "American" charcuterie sampling. Such as burgers and toppings, pancakes with syrups and fruit or apple pie with hot cinnamon apples, whipped cream in a small mason jar, caramel syrup and chopped peanuts.

At Coral Cottage we have two different sizes of charcuterie boards to choose from. And to add to the fun of it, there's a spot to attach a fun embellishment that pertains to the party in some way.

These charcuterie boards make the perfect spot to rest your wine glasses and cheese pairings on the ottoman while you snuggle up for a movie. You can also gift this to someone as a house warming or birthday present too. Made of mango wood that is both sturdy and attractive, this board is ready for your favorite attachment. The arm of the board serves as a handle and a spot to hang your serving board when it's not in use.

So bring your favorite snacks or desserts to the table and spread your happiness!

Choose from the mini size ($64.95) or the big size ($89.95).

Tinsley

Driving on a dark highway between New Hampshire and Vermont Sunday night, two friends, 31 year old Cam Laundry and 40 year old Justin Connors were heading home with their furry companions, a one year old Shiloh Shepherd named Tinsley and a bulldog. Remnants of snow covered the edges of the highway as they crossed the state border. What happened next is still a mystery that comes with a miracle ending.

The Ford truck Cam Laundry was driving went off the edge of the highway and down an embankment, turning the metal and glass into a crumpled mess. Both men were ejected and now lay unconscious in the freezing cold dark.

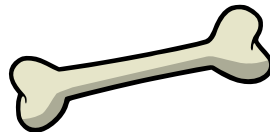

Tinsley, the shepherd, unharmed, took matters into her own paws. She made her way back to the highway and began to pace the bridge, looking for help.

After several phone calls reporting a dog on the bridge, two Lebanon, New Hampshire area State Troopers were dispatched. They found the dog but had no luck trying to catch it.

Eventually they decided to follow it. Crossing the state line they found a damaged guardrail and discovered the wrecked vehicle.

Tinsley had saved their lives. Both men were taken to the hospital with injuries and suffering from hypothermia. Lassie to the rescue.

The reward from her owner? A giant Venison steak and all the love she can handle. "Tinsley is my guardian angel," Good job Tinsley.

Neverland

By Carol Ann Ross

Special to the Topsail Times

Everyone knows that Topsail Island did not open for development until 1949, so the island's history may seem rather short. Be that as it may, it is a rich and diverse history full of pirates, and WASPs, Bumblebees, fishermen and good hard working folks.

The story goes that Blackbeard the pirate hung out around our little sand bar back in the late 1600s and early 1700s, thus the reference to pirates. WASPs (Women Air Force Service Pilots) from Camp Davis in Holly Ridge, towed targets (during World War II) from the shore of our island and flew simulated missions for anti aircraft gunnery training on the firing range here. In essence, WASPs were shot at.

Warehouse located north of the bridge

World War II and Camp Davis left a lot of buildings on the island. There were warehouses, barracks, fire out stations, horse stables, an officer's club-all kinds of places. We kids, the ones who grew up on the island, made use of them. They were our playgrounds and our parents utilized them as well, making them into residences and shops. The fishing pier, Barnacle Bills, was the Officer's Club, the now Catholic church was a barracks, the Pirates Den was a garage. I grew up in one of the old barracks and remember riding my tricycle down the long hall before my father made the building into apartments.

The place now known as the Gathering has a section that was the Baptist church. If anyone remembers King's Apartments, just north of Barnacle Bills, that was the Officer's quarters. There were horse stables back there too.

If you go south, just past the traffic circle on the island, go a few blocks, you'll see one of the World War II warehouses.

Pirate's Den

Photos provided by Carol Ann Ross

It's been taken care of and renovated, but it's still standing after eighty years. If you go north from the traffic circle, you'll see a tall chimney just past Hwy. 55 restaurant. It was identical to the other warehouse, alas, one of our hurricanes did destroy it. The kids in Surf City used to hang out there and play on the old trucks left there by the military. Some time in the early 60s, those trucks were replaced with basketball hoops. I guess you might call that our first community center. It gave the kids of the island a place to play when it was raining.

As for Bumblebees, they refer to our nine towers built in 1946 to observe the ramjet powered missiles launched from Topsail Beach. All but one of those towers is still standing, most are disguised as residences. They've withstood every single hurricane we've had since they were built. I guess if you have to go through a hurricane, a tower is the place to be.

When I was a kid, jumping out of the towers was one of the fun things we got to do. But then, we had sand dunes to land in.

Remnants of the warehouse after hurricane

Ross Apartments in late 1950's

Our history is rich for such a tiny place, and yes, to some, fishing may be a Bland subject, but at one time Topsail, with its nine fishing piers, was known as the fisherman's paradise. Starting at the north end and working your way south, there was McKees Fishing Pier, then Paradise, Ocean City, Scotch Bonnet, Barnacle Bills, Surf City, Dolphin, Jolly Roger and then the Sound Pier.

Except for winter months, those places stayed busy. Several offered more than just fishing; they had arcades, oyster bars, and restaurants. They were truly family friendly.

Fishing was a big deal back then, even more so than now. There was seine fishing (I wrote about that a few weeks ago.) And then there was the Topsail Marina. Several charter fishing boats docked there, Buddy's Pirate and Cloud Nine, to name a few. My father, Frank Ross, captained the Cloud Nine and for a few years I worked as first mate. Now, that was an experience I will never forget. It helped to cultivate this deep passion I have for the ocean.

For those of us who remember those burgeoning times, we see our childhood peeking out from the restored buildings, and remember how simple life was then.

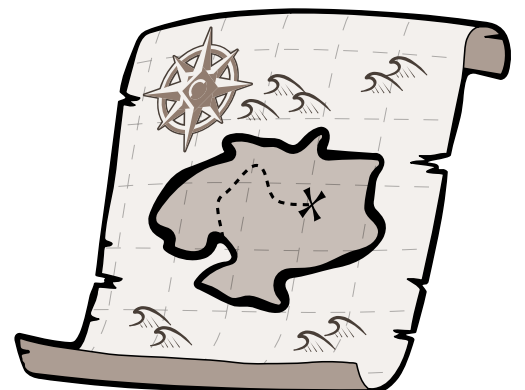

Old Bumblebee Tower

We were pirates, racing up sand dunes and jumping from squatty oak trees, We were wasps, flying through the air like the ever present aircraft from Camp Lejeune, we were daredevils who jumped from bumblebees and explorers of every marshy cove and dune trough. We lived off the crabs and fish we caught, built our own little fires to cook them-heck, we lived in Neverland. Some of us have still not grown up, I think.

It was the night before Christmas and all through the house not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse. Except Bob. Bob was seated before the fire with care, a drink one hand, the other in his hair. Had he really pulled off the perfect Holiday? He had wondered the same thing while having breakfast at City Cafe.

Bob had taken his mother in law to New Attitude and now her hair sparkled and bounced and she no longer looked like a dude. He ordered her Paparazzi jewelry from Anne and picked it up yesterday and hid it in the coffee can (don't worry he will add a bow).

All the food was prepared and ready to serve. He had wings from Southern Roots Grille for his old cousin Merve. A quick trip to Thomas Seafood and the crab dip was ready. A fishing day at Seaview Pier and now he had trout for uncle Eddie.

At Herring's Outdoor Sports, he picked up a kayak and hat for his teenage cousin, Durword Vonzack.

At DDT Furniture he found plenty of things, including an outdoor dining set that looked like tree rings.

For his niece he bought puzzles, pillows and art that glitters at Beach Furniture Outfitters.

He had taken the family through Lake Linda's Christmas Lights, not once but twice.

As he sat by the fire and took another swig, he wondered what his mother-in-law was up to now that she no longer needed her wig.

In the kitchen Gertrude sat on the phone, telling her friend Edith about her new home. She just loved her realtor, Kelly Pollard and decided to make her a fresh batch of collards. Lighthouse Electric had made all her Christmas lights bright, while Tammy Lamberth made sure all her insurance was right. She loved her new Topsail throw, so soft and unique that she bought on Black Friday from Coral Cottage Boutiques!

She picked up a few gift certificates for Bob and her daughter that day. She got him one at Paradise Axe and Arcade so he and the family could go play. She bought one at JM's On The Water so that they would have to take her to dinner, including her daughter. She bought herself a nice revolver at Surf City Guns so she could go shooting with all of her sons.

As Bob overheard his mother in law exclaim she was moving real soon, he smiled real wide and toasted the moon. Just a few more days to go and she would be out, he threw open the door and loudy did shout,

"Merry Christmas to all and to all a goodnight, just a few more days and the world will be right,"

OCPAW

By Dotty Harding

What is the difference between a feral and a stray cat?

Current scientific data is sketchy, but most estimates place the number of wild or feral cats in America at 70 million and rising. This includes cats that were abandoned, lost and those born in the wild. Females in this population have an average of 1.6 litters each year, with an average of 5 kittens per litter. Do the math! This is an overwhelming problem for kind-hearted folks and rescues with limited budgets... we can't get ahead of the numbers with those unchecked amounts of litters. So what can we do?

The first is to recognize the difference between an abandoned and a feral cat. A feral cat is a cat that has had no human interaction in their lives and usually lives in colonies. As such, they will exhibit aggression and/or fear whenever there is a human nearby. They are used to fending for themselves and will use their teeth or claws without much provocation. So whenever you approach a cat on the street, being cautious is a good idea. To help these ferals in Onslow County OCPAW, (Onslow County Partners for Animal Welfare), has received a grant from Onslow County Community Foundation for our PawsAbility Spay/Neuter Program and Brenda Hunter

Williams, (Great Moves Realty) & Spanky's Sports Bar of Jacksonville in a recent funding event. The funds we have received help us assist companion animals and ferals with our spay/neuter programs which have functioned successfully for many years. We are blessed now to offer a specific program for ferals to spay/neuter, vaccinate, and ear tip for only $15.00, and we also have drop traps and transfer crates to assist you. Spay/Neuter vouchers are available on our website www.oc-paw.com. Pet Mart on Rt 210 in the ferry and Curvy Chic Consignment.

Trap/Neuter, Release (TNR)

Perhaps the most effective strategy that has been documented to help feral cat colonies is the trap-neuter-release, or TNR, method. This management plan involves trapping healthy stray or feral cats, sterilizing them, vaccinating as appropriate, and returning them to their colony.

This helps on several fronts:

- Eliminates the addition of new kittens through breeding
- Allows for a shrinking colony, increasing the availability of resources like food
- Decreases howling, yowling, and fighting associated with breeding
- Lowers the transmission of diseases, such as feline immunodeficiency virus and panleukopenia, that can devastate cats

► Opens up shelter space for other animals

TNR allows for healthier cats and has less impact on the surrounding community over time.

Overall, it is a win-win!

What to do if you find a stray abandoned cat or kitten?

Take a photo and post on every social media site you know of and canvas your immediate area to see if their family is searching for them. Call Onslow Animal Services and send them a picture of the cat, location, and your contact information. Being a foster or finding one is the optimal way to help until their owners are located. Send your information to OCPAW, and we will list the animal on our Lost & Found sites. If no owner comes forward, we can assist you with a spay/neuter voucher and post it on our adoption sites.

If a domestic cat is either neglected, lost, or even abused, it can develop feral-like qualities, but a previously domesticated and socialized cat can never become fully feral. They become strays and then maybe, in some situations, can develop feral-like qualities.

This is good because a cat that is lost, abused, or neglected can eventually find peace and happiness again in loving families. If they have learned to live with humans when they were young, they will quickly revert back to that domestic state as well. Cats, while known to dislike change and stressors, can quickly adapt again if the conditions are right.

Relocating?

Time is the enemy of finding a home for any animal! Unfortunately, there is not much that organizations such as OCPAW can do to help if given only hours or a day to find placement. It's a stressful situation for the owner and the pet, but we have had some great success stories for which I am so grateful to be a part of when given the time to be able to help.

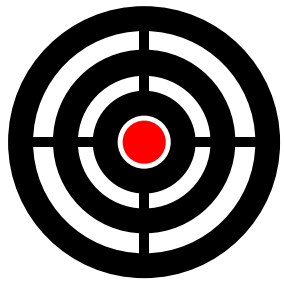

So in every act of kindness, we hold in our own hands the mercy of our Maker, whose purposes are in life and not death, whose love does not stop at us but surrounds us, bestowing dignity and beauty and hope on every creature that lives and suffers and perishes. Perhaps that is part of the animals' role among us, to awaken humility, to turn our minds back to the mystery of things, and open our hearts to that most impractical of hopes in which all creation speaks as one. For them as for us, if there is any hope at all then it is the same hope, and the same love, and the same God who (Dominion by Matthew Scully) "shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away" (Rev.21:4)

Stump Sound Oysters

Stump sound oysters are a delicacy many restaurants feature. The buttery fat oyster has the salinity of the Atlantic and surrounding marshes. The local oysters on the Carolina coast are known as being some of the best. The tasty delicacies are a staple of the local climate. Oyster roasts and oyster bars are almost exclusively coastal.

I recently tasted my first Stump Sound oyster. I can assure the hype is warranted. If mermaids made butter I imagine the taste would be the same.

Unfortunately, oyster populations have decreased over time due to over-harvesting, climate change and a decline in water quality.

When most people hear the word recycling the first thought is plastics, paper and metal cans. We don't often think of oyster shells. And actually recycling oyster shells is an amazing way to help our environment.

Did you know that one adult oyster can filter up to 50 gallons of water a day? The small oyster works hard for the environment by providing clean water and habitats for other sea dwellers like crab and fin fish. Oyster reefs are self maintaining and once the shells are put back in the water the oysters build off of each other. Baby oysters called spat attach to the reefs and make new oysters. Healthy shellfish create reefs that help control erosion.

So after we feasted on these amazing oysters I took the shells to the Morris Landing oyster recycling station. The North Carolina Coastal Federation has a site there for discarded oyster shells. I met a local gentleman there named Kermit Merrit who was also doing his part to recycle shells.

Not only did I get to feel good about doing my part for the environment I got to enjoy the wonder of this 52 acre tract owned by the North Carolina Coastal Federation. In this beautiful protected habitat you can see the oyster reefs and enjoy the natural wonder of the salt marsh.

This place is a tribute to a local woman named Lena Ritter who worked valiantly to protect our coast. It is a beautiful legacy to her selfless work.

I recommend the oysters. I definitely recommend recycling them and if you get to do it in a place as lovely as Morris landing I would say it is a blessing all the way around.

Surf City Police Department Retirement Party

By Dorothy Royal

In a Tuesday afternoon event that appeared to be a "who's who in law enforcement" Chief Ron Shanahan was graciously thanked for all of his years of service in law enforcement with the Town of Surf City. Several members of the town gave speeches, most of them light and funny, but all with the same theme. Chief Shanahan had been a wonderful asset to the community of Surf City in his profession, and a man who will be respected for his professionalism for years to come. Area police chiefs, the Sheriffs from Onslow, Pender and New Hanover Counties and members of fire and rescue were among those in attendance at the Surf City Municipal Building.

As the celebration concluded, the Town Council was called to order and the new Chief Voorhees was sworn in to begin his hopefully long and prosperous career as Surf City Chief of Police.
