Davis Boxing

Promotions like no other!

Article by local newspaper D.C area.

There is no boxing show like one in the DMV area, and on Saturday, May 18, Davis Boxing Promotions put on one of those classic events. Featuring some of the top young, super featherweight, bantam and super bantamweights – including two champions in the co and main events – local boxing fans were treated to a memorable night at the Entertainment and Sports Arena (ESA) in Southeast Washington.

The festive atmosphere featured go-go and hip-hop music blasting in the background and iconic Hall of Fame ring announcer Henry “Discombobulating” Jones on the microphone. Other treats included the showcasing of Sharon Sams as one of the rare female ring referees, who showcased her skills as the only woman referee in the ring in four of the fights.

This was all put on the mastermind of Eric Davis, of Davis Boxing Promotions.

“I had been doing some comedy and talent shows but I always wanted to delve into boxing because of its rich history in Washington, D.C.,” said Davis.

“So, in 2022, I stepped out on a leap of faith and started Davis Boxing Promotions. We started our first three shows at the Merrick Center in Southeast before moving to the ESA. Coming from Southeast D.C., in what is called East of the River, it held special meaning for me to be able to host it there.”

The Darkside of boxing!

Boxing can be a dangerous sport with potential health risks, including injuries and other challenges:

Injuries

Boxers can suffer from a variety of injuries, including concussions, cuts and facial blows, hand, finger, and wrist injuries, muscular injuries, ankle sprains, and dislocated shoulders. These injuries can be minimized by following rules and regulations, using protective equipment, and training properly.

Trainers' financial challenges

Trainers often have verbal or handshake agreements with boxers and promoters about their financial cut, and they may not get paid until after the boxer receives their purse check. This can cause anxiety, especially after a loss, and some of the best trainers have been stiffed by more than $100,000.

Mental health

Some boxers may experience mental health issues after retiring from the sport, such as dementia

By Missy Fitzwater

"I personally plan on being able to use my brain in the future...Why on earth would anyone choose to voluntarily get hit in the head and face?...You're a sweet girl from the country, why do you want to hang out with thugs and gang members who have nothing better to do with their lives than get into fights?...Anyone who would get involved with that is nothing more than a savage....Have you lost your mind? Well, you're about to!..... Have you no self-respect?"

These are just a few of the comments I received when I told family and friends that I had started boxing. I was stunned, rendered speechless. The impact of these sentiments was more crushing than any blow I had been dealt in the ring.

Where were the enthusiastic, supportive reactions I had anticipated? This was my initial encounter to the ominous stigma that boxing is branded with. It would not be my last. People were not at all shy in regards to sharing their opinion about boxing with me. As a matter of fact, it seemed that most felt that it was their duty to enlighten me to the perils of boxing.

People ask why 6 round titles?

By Staff:

It has been up time after time and these are the reasons why the American Boxing Organization has decided since 2014 to make 6 round titles.

As we all know all World titles WBC, WBA, WBO,IBF and IBO are 12 rounds. They dropped it after the Duku Kim vs Ray Mancini in the 80's where safety became a real serious topic. So, then it was proposed and later adopted by all.

Now, since most titles are fought and competed for 12, 10 and 8, we felt since we are a continental title, we should put other safety factors by reducing the amount of rounds and adapt what some states allow, therefore since we are a 10 round title our title paradigm is the following:

American Regional 6 to 8 rounds providing the state allows it.

Americas, North and South American and Continental titles will be following The standard 8 and 10 round model. This simple formula has allowed us to safe guard and increase longevity in the ring and after boxing. Our standards have been accepted by the following states that allow 6 round title. Texas, Indiana, Kentucky, Wisconsin, W Virginia, Washington D.C and the Tri States.

Michie Munoz making things happen in Mexico!

Michie Munoz a friend of the sweet science and former fighter staging consistant fights in Bajio Nuevo Leon GTO.

He stages among the best cards in Nuevo Leon, GTO. He stages about 6 to 8 cards a year and is very consistant. His last card was a complete sell out and drew fighters and fans from the United States.

His approach on boxing is being transparent and doing things right! The organic growth of Bajio Promotions has been steady and exciting for the community as he provides oppotunites to inspiring fighters and guess what. He's already produced two ABO Champions, so now he's got our attention.
