

Boston Celtics Offseason

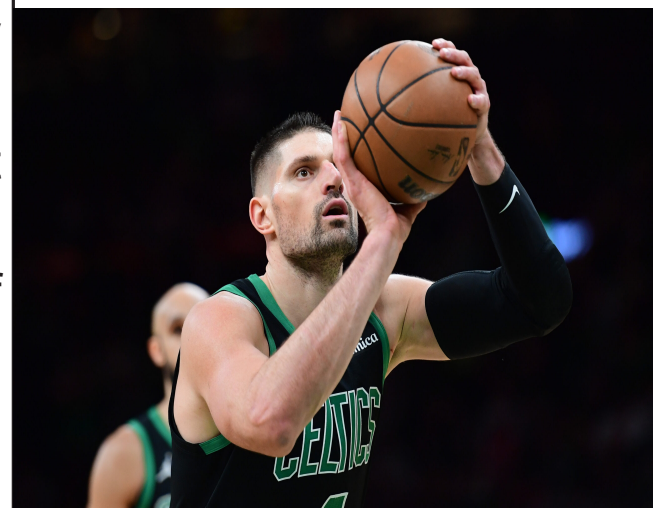

The Boston Celtics had a disappointing post season. They got eliminated in the first round by the 76ers. The Celtics were up 3-1 in the series just to let the 76ers come back and win. The Celtics did exceed expectations this season being the 2 seed with arguably their best player Jayson Tatum out. Many players stepped up and started to play great. However the season is still over and the Celtics have some decisions to make this offseason.

What should they do?

To start, it was Nikola Vucevic's last year on his contract. The Celtics have to make a decision: do they let him go or do they offer him a contract. If I am the Celtics I am letting him walk. As a Celtics fan I have hated whenever Vucevic has been on the floor. Closer to when we got him he was playing well but recently and especially in the playoffs he has been a liability not being able to make shots and being a terrible defender which you just cannot have when playing against Joel Embiid. I would much rather have Garza playing because he shows a lot of hustle and is a pretty good shooter. Playing with the Celtics is a very valuable part of your game that you need.

Continued on Page 2

Derrick White

Should they keep him, trade him, or let him walk?

Future Stars?

What should the Celtics do with their young core of players?

Jaylen traded for Giannis?

What trades should the Celtics make to get back to winning the title?

Derrick White

Hugo
Gonzalez

Baylor Scheierman

Ron
Harper Jr.

MAJOR MOVES FOR THE CELTICS?

The next decision they have to make is whether or not they are going to trade Derrick White. I love Derrick White but it might be time for him to go. He has been great with his time in Boston but he could very well get traded. If he does get traded they are looking for either a true point guard because the Celtics have not had one all season or a Center that has played a starting role before and can make an impact on both ends of the floor. As a Celtics fan I would love to see him stay but if he goes I hope it's for someone worth it that can make the Celtics a better team.

The Celtics should be keeping their young players like Jordan Walsh, Ron Harper Jr, Hugo Gonzalez, and Baylor Scheierman. All of these players have shown a ton of promise even playing better than the starters at times. They could progress so much next season and become even more valuable players than they were last season. They all show an unreal amount of hustle and they are all pretty good on the defensive end being able to be given the assignment of top players on a team and even in the league at some times. These players could impact the team a lot and I feel like it is needed for most of them to stay.

SHOULD THE BOSTON CELTICS TRADE PLAYERS WITH THE CLEVELAND CAVALIERS OR MILWAUKEE BUCKS?

I would not be surprised if Sam Hauser or Payton Pritchard leave Boston. As I stated before the Celtics need a true point guard and help at the center position. Depending on how the Cavaliers do in these playoffs and if they don't beat the Pistons next round I would not be surprised to see them switch up the team slightly. I would love to see a player like Jarrett Allen play for Boston given that he is great defensively and a serious lob threat around the rim. I do not think this trade is very likely but the Celtics and Cavaliers could make a deal that looks something like Derrick White, Sam Hauser, and Garza for Jarrett Allen and Dennis Schroder. This benefits the Celtics more than the Cavaliers because the Celtics get a good center and a pretty good veteran point guard. I think but I think this trade could be possible depending on how the Cavaliers do this series and season.

The Celtics have the opportunity to make a big splash and go get Giannis Antetokounmpo. They would have to trade Jaylen Brown and a few first round picks. It seems like a no brainer to get a top 5 player in the league. If you're the Celtics you have to think about this a lot. Do you think it is worth it to break up a duo who have been playing together since Tatum has been drafted. They are no doubt a top 3 duo in the league right now. Giannis could bring the team to another level with all the spacing around him. Giannis would fit well on this team. Personally, I do not know yet if the trade would happen. I think it is a good trade but I do not know if Giannis would stay healthy and if it is worth it to break up the J's.

To summarize this all we free up some money from letting Vucevic go, it might be a good idea to trade Derrick White, we have to keep our young players, we probably have to make another a trade for a center that's better than Garza or Queta, and we could very possibly end the offseason with Giannis Antetokounmpo.

