Today's Organ Music

Prelude: J S Bach (1685-1750) Organ Choral "Adorn yourself, O dear soul" BWV 654

Postlude: J S Bach (1685-1750) Fugue in G Major, BWV 541

"Schmücke dich, O liebe Seele," BWV 654 (Adorn yourself, O dear soul), traditionally accompanies Holy Communion as a joyous feast. The familiar melody is attributed to Johann Crueger (1598-1662), and true to the first word of its title, Bach has richly "adorned" it with ornaments and melismas.

The Fugue from BWV541 is built on repeated notes after which amazing contrapuntal and harmonic passages follow, punctuated by a cadence which launches the Fugue into its euphoric final bars. It was copied by Bach's hand on the back of a recommendation letter he wrote for his eldest son, Wilhelm Friedemann as he applied for a position as organist at the main church in Dresden. Needless to say that the young Bach got the job, and we have an amazing piece, for the glory of God and enjoyment of the soul, as Bach used to describe his music.
